QUARRY CHOSEN AS SUICIDE SCENE

Unidentified Man, Well Dressed, Shoots Himself in the Head.

BOY WITNESSED DEED INTENDED TO CAUSE DEATH

Wounded Man Is About 35 Years Old, With Brown Hair, Eyes and Mustache and Gated Appearance.

An unidentified man about 35 years old, shot himself through the head at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning in a stone quarry at Ewing and Scott avenues. He was taken to the City Hospital, where it was said he could hardly recover.

Ernest Dugge, aged 16, of 620 South Ewing, a water boy working with a gang of railroad laborers, saw the man walk down Scott avenue to the quarry.

He thought the man was acting strangely and watched him. After going among the weeds that are growing in the quarry the man took a revolver from his pocket and after looking about placed the revolver to the back of his head and fired.

The boy called to some workmen. They ran to the quarry and seeing that the man was still alive, took the revolver from his hand and called the police.

He did not recover consciousness when the wound was dressed at the hospital. The pupil of the left eye was found to be enlarged, while the right pupil was normal, indicating lesion of the right side of the brain.

None of the effects established his identification. A card in his pocket contained the address, printed in Bohemian, "Sam Harakopos, restauranteur, 861 Sixth street and 20 East Indian avenue." On the back of the card was written, "Danaropus." His name was marked "L. G." His other effects were the part of a Los Angeles newspaper or magazine, May 15, containing rooms for rent advertisements.

He was about 35 years old, with brown hair, mustache, eyes very well dressed, 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs about 170 pounds.

The man was noticed by many of the residents in the Scott and Ewing avenues neighborhood as he went to the quarry, but they say he had never seen him before.

"CYCLONE" KELLY ACQUITTED

Judge Tracy Was Not Convinced That He Caused Flight of Sailor Crocker.

William Kelly, more widely known to fame as "Cyclone" Kelly, was discharged in the First District police court Wednesday morning on an information alleging he had been wilfully negligent in his property. There was no evidence to show that he had broken two panes of glass in the saloon at 18 South Sixth street, as was charged.

Kelly and his manager got into an argument at this saloon, May 18. During the dispute, some one fired a gun and others misfired. These found their way through adjoining windows.

It did not appear, however, to Judge Tracy that the sailor was responsible for the flight of the saloon crockery. Cyclone left the courtroom with much gusto.

WIFE FORGIVES SPOUSE WHO DESERTED HER

Cincinnati Woman Traces Fugitive Husband to St. Louis, but Will Not Prosecute.

After causing her husband's arrest and riding with him and her children in a patrol wagon to the Four Courts, Mrs. Jeanette Hall of Cincinnati, forgave him for deserting her and induced the police to release him to accompany her home.

Mrs. Hall, accompanied by two children, a girl of 10 and a baby, arrived in St. Louis Monday evening with her husband, B. J. Hall, who, it is said, had left her ten weeks before with a woman of whom he had become enamored.

She told the police she had followed the couple to Kankakee, Ill., and had found

UNMASKED MOB HANGS THREE MEN

CHARMED FROM HOME BY MONITOR

One of the Victims Was White and the Others Were Negroes.

Mrs. Charlton Believes Nephew Went to Join Arkansas' Crew.

Mrs. Charles Charlton of 466 Beck avenue is trying to find her nephew and foster son, Ernest Charlton, whom she saw since Friday morning.

When he left home he wore a greenish-mixed coat, grayish-mixed trousers, black derby hat, blue-striped shirt, without collar or tie. He is 15 years old, of average height and weight. His complexion is light, and his eyes blue.

From a talk which he had with Carl Kingston, a bookseller at the Charlton home, it is believed that the missing lad is somewhere between this city and Ste. Genevieve, where the monitor Arkansas lay at anchor until Monday. The boy was enthusiastic over naval life, and supposed all he would have to do was to offer his services and go to the monitors and charm the monitor. He said nothing about the navy to his foster parents, fearing objections.

As no word has been received since his disappearance, it is feared that the boy has met with some accident. It is said the work was done by a mob of about fifty unmasked men, many of whom were prominent in the county.

TAX LEVY NARROWLY ESCAPED

City Saved From Year of Insufficient Revenue at Last Moment by a Single Vote.

The House of Delegates has passed the bill reported by the ways and means committee, fixing the tax rate for the coming year at $100,000, an increase of $50,000 over the $50,000 rate of the previous year.

The vote was 14 to 13. Speaker Hughes being absent. The meeting was last night at the hall of the Knights of Pythias.

As no word has been received since his disappearance, it is feared that the boy has met with some accident. It is said the work was done by a mob of about fifty unmasked men, many of whom were prominent in the county.

The people of Mulberry became enraged and yesterday secured evidence which led them to believe that Randall had employed negroes to kill Brown. The three men were taken into custody, and one of the negroes confessed that Randall had hired the negroes to commit the crime. This confession was made at 2 o'clock this morning and the bodies were buried.

During the ride to the Four Courts Hall pleaded successfully with his wife for forgiveness.

STONE "LAUGHS AND GROWS FAT"

Cole County Prosecutor Shows Little Interest in Boodle Cases.

Price Stone, prosecuting attorney of Cole County, is at the Laclede Hotel.

Before the grand jury was called at Jefferson City in March to investigate legislative corruption, Stone said that he didn't think there would be much work in that line to do.

"I know this is a rule never to be interviewed," he said Wednesday morning, when asked if he thought another session of the Cole County grand jury would be called soon.

When the work of the St. Louis grand jury was mentioned to Stone, he smiled.

"Do the work of Mr. Folk and the disclosures in regard to boodling at Jefferson City interest you?" he was asked.

"They would interest me more," he replied. "If they came within the statute of limitations.

"But that's all I've got to say. I'm not talking at all."

Many residents of Jefferson City think Stone had an opportunity to achieve a wide reputation by jumping into the headlines and arena and fighting the bribe-givers and legislative boodlers.

But Stone is satisfied with the plan he is now pursuing.

"I laugh and grow fat," he observed merrily in the presence of Representative Farley of Platte County Wednesday morning.

Other Jefferson City residents say they consider it very probable that Judge Hazel will call another session of the grand jury this summer.

"Judge Hazel is holding court in Booneville, I think," said Stone. He declined to talk about what the judge might do.

FIGHTING FOR JETT'S CUSTODY

Prisoner's Lawyer Makes Another Effort to Take Him to Breathitt County, But Fails.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 20.—Another evidence of the desperate determination of Curtis Jett to get back to Jackson, Ky., was shown in the attempt to get him out of jail by serving another warrant on him.

Attorney Stevenson presented to Sheriff McCord a warrant sworn out at Jackson by Justice Edwards, charging "murder in Breathitt County."

McCord presented it to Boone, but he refused to surrender Jett. Stevenson then had Boone brought into court to show cause why he did not give him up. The court gave Boone until June 4 to answer, thus checkpoining the plan of Jett's attorneys.

Rainbow Excites Throng.

Pedestrians Crossing Olive Street Have Cause for Alarm.

After running a block down Olive street at top speed, a horse belonging to J. A. Stern of 271 Thomas street, collided with a northbound Lee avenue car at Fourth street and was badly injured.

Stern was driving an express wagon, and one of the wheels came off in the collision at Lee and Olive streets. The horse became frightened and broke loose from the wagon. Many pedestrians crossing the street were forced to run away from the rapidly moving animal.

CAIRO, Ill., May 20.—The monitor Arkansas anchored at Devil's Island, 10 miles above Cape Girardeau, last night. She is reported as getting along nicely today and will probably reach Cairo tonight.

WONT SING WITH SCHWEICKARDT

Physician Leaves Liederkrantz Society Because of Boodle Disclosures.

Dr. A. Siebert of 1647 South Jefferson avenue resigned his membership in the Liederkrantz Society Tuesday evening after his motion to ask Charles Schaefer to resign as vice-president of the St. Louis Singers' Society was voted down at a meeting of the singing section of the Liederkrantz.

He met Schweickardt during rehearsals. When he read that Schweickardt had confessed to the grandjury the details of a long career as a legislative agent, Dr. Siebert was surprised that such a man should be vice-president of the society.

"I went to the meeting last night. I expressed my opinion to several gentlemen, and they told me the members were against me. So when the meeting was in session, I offered a motion that Schweickardt be requested to resign as vice-president. No one seconded my motion."

"Louis Schaefer got up and said that Schweickardt was a good man and had worked very hard for the society, and that he was very sorry the matter had been brought up."

"The former seconded Schaefer's motion that my motion be voted down. It was nobody voted with me. Then I handed in my resignation from the Singers' Society and all."

From a talk which he had with Carl Kingston, a bookseller at the Charlton home, it is believed that the missing lad is somewhere between this city and Ste. The boy was enthusiastic over naval life, and supposed all he would have to do was to offer his services and go to the monitors and charm the monitor. EVIDENCE AGAINST HARTMANN OPENS

Difficulty Experienced in Getting Jury for Former Delegate.

PROCEDURE CONFORMS TO SUPREME COURT RULINGS

Points in Decision on Faulkner and Lehmann Cases Expected to Affect Rulings in Boodele Trial.

After more than a day spent selecting a jury for the trial of Emil Hartmann, former member of the House of Delegates from Ninth Ward, on the charge of bribery, growing out of the $47,500 distributed among the 19 House combine members for their vote on the city lighting bill of 1900, finally began before Judge Ryan of division No. 8 of the criminal court.

The $5000 fund, of which Hartmann is accused of having received $3500 as his share, was disbursed at Julius Lehmann's famous "birthday party."

The indictment specifies that the money was put up by Edward Butler.

Only a few persons were in the courtroom during the examination of the venire from which the special jury was selected.

Out of 40 examined, only 22 were declared competent. It appeared that most of the jurors had read the newspaper accounts of the trials and, as well as all others accused of bootlegging, were guilty.

The testimony presented different facts in their minds, but they could not get away from the consideration that the newspapers had printed the facts.

Give us 10,000 francs for the Paris office and another 10,000 francs to America and your son will be present," said M. Courtin, pera, refused to disgorge.

CHAPTER IV.

Husband in Prison, Religious Ceremony by Proxy Is Performed.

M. Arby returned to St. Louis greatly disheartened at his failure to recover his funds. M. Courtin had written to his father in Paris asking for another 10,000 francs, but he had been unable to get him to come the president of the France-American Exposition syndicate. His father called upon the Paris directors. He was met at the door by a gigantic nervous man who said the directors were very busy. Finally one of the directors came in, and the father asked him how much money was necessary to make his son president of the syndicate.

"Give us 10,000 francs for the Paris office and another 10,000 francs to America and your son will be present," said M. Courtin, pera, refused to disgorge.

The father of the American was very rich and very indifferent. "What can I do?" he said. "I am going to try to get Arby."

Meantime M. Courtin had written to his father in Paris asking for another 10,000 francs, but he had been unable to get him to come the president of the France-American Exposition syndicate. His father called upon the Paris directors. He was met at the door by a gigantic nervous man who said the directors were very busy. Finally one of the directors came in, and the father asked him how much money was necessary to make his son president of the syndicate.

"Give us 10,000 francs for the Paris office and another 10,000 francs to America and your son will be present," said M. Courtin, pera, refused to disgorge.

The husband now assailed him. His wife was unhappy because there had been no religious ceremony to sanctify their marriage. He promised her that she would go before a priest as soon as his business affairs showed signs of tranquillity. But alas, this was not to be seen.

M. Courtin had gone to Assistant Prosecutor Foster to get him to intercede with the Paris directors in the affairs of the syndicate, accusing Arby of embarrassing his money. A warrant was issued for the arrest of Arby on April 25, when he was arrested and came into prison.

He was misery enough for the young bride, who was little comforted by full hope. For weeks, until she procured the forgiveness of her parents and relatives, she clung to her husband.

But she eventually found a friend in a compatriot, M. Durand, who had been in St. Louis for years.

The friend, Durand, was able to meet his husband in the jail and took him many delicacies, while she comforted him.

She still grieved over the fact that they had had no religious marriage. She had no time to go over to the church and its good wife. They saw the authorities, who would not consent to a marriage in the jail and would not let them see Arby that it might take place outside.

Then an idea came to M. Durand like an angel of light: they could not marry in the jail, and M. Arby could not come out, why, what could be easier? They would have a civil proxy to do it.

M. Durand hurried to Fr. Rollins, who later was Archbishop Kain, and procured a sanction of such a marriage.

Then the French friends pair were very few in St. Louis, last M. Jules Loix, a well-known lawyer and master, consented to use the office.

Loix went to the jail and secured authority to conduct the religious marriage ceremony in his office, with his wife, according to the rites in Catholic Church.

In the evening of May 11 a strange figure met in the parlor of M. Durand's use, 201 Manchester avenue. There were two men, M. Durand and M. Loix, and Fr. Rollins of St. Malachy's church.

M. Loix, standing in the place of his friend, M. Arby, took the hand of Mme. M. Durand gave the bride away.

M. Durand was master of honor. Do you take this woman, Mme. M. to be your lawful wedded wife?" asked the priest.

"Yes, M. Edouard Arby, stand in his place, I do," replied M. Loix.

Then the full ceremony was performed to the rites of the church, and Arby and his bride gave her a wedded husband a bride's kiss.

Kelley is said to be defiant. Fugitives from justice are defiant when there is no extradition treaty.

It cost $30,000 to jam the street railway consolidation bill through the legislature. No transit money!

The city, state or national treasury out of which party services are paid for is liable to be empty at almost any time.

A decoration for mothers is proposed in France. It may be made more effective if accompanied by an allowance for family grocery bills.

The statute of limitations saves two or three eminent citizens from the consequences of conventional crime in the transit consolidation matter.

TWO INCONSISTENCIES.

Mr. Charles H. Cramp, speaking as an expert, declares that Americans are masters of the ocean.

"England," he says, "is now aware that the United States has outstripped her, and she is doing her utmost to regain her supremacy as mistress of the seas."

Along with this comes the statement from the Treasury Department of an increase of 100 per cent in exports since 1897. If we are masters of the ocean, and can take the carrying trade of the world, why don't we build ships and take it? The Cramps have been persistent subsidy beggars, pleading that American shipping was helpless against the feebest nation, without a fat subsidy. If now we are strong enough to make head against the strongest, do we need protection against the weakest?

Again, if we can't hold our own market against the wares of Europe, how does it happen that we are strong enough to invade and capture European markets? Are we stronger in Europe than at home?

Or is it the policy of Republicanism to build up monopoly at home and generously grant foreign buyers competitive terms? That seems to be the logic of it.

Neither shipping nor manufacturers need protection or subsidies. To continue the policy is to cripple our country by concentrating wealth in few hands and give the foreigner an advantage over ourselves.

The railway mail clerk who makes the mistake of putting other people's money into his sock instead of his own has a started idea of the saving habit.

JAM PUFFS AND CONSTITUTIONS.

"A woman who can make jam puffs," says the German Emperor, "is worth more than a woman who can discuss a constitution."

This saying is merely evidence that William likes jam puffs. The Emperor has had so much trouble with men who discuss the constitution that it is not strange he disparages women who propose to annoy him in the same way. If he could have his way there would be no constitution to discuss by men or women. Then he could eat his jam puffs undisturbed, and listen with a quiet mind while his Frau discussed kinder, kirche, kueche und kleider, the four K's which, it is said, the Empress thinks complete the sphere of woman.

The German emperor is a great man, but not infallible. Whether or not the creator of a jam puff is superior to the creator of a constitution depends in some degree upon the goodness of the jam puff and the badness of the constitution. A jam puff well made is undeniably a more praiseworthy product than an ill-made instrument of government. The question, therefore, is so complicated with subsidiary and subordinate considerations that it is impossible to decide it off hand.

The real vital question is, why do women neglect jam puffs and take to discussing constitutions, when the sterner feminine asserts itself? Are jam puffs considered unmanly by the leaders of feminine thought? Let Frau Hohenholz say something sarcastic about that.

The St. Louis strap passenger feels that he has had to pay a good deal of the $30,000 that went for boodle in the street railway bill.

A CONDUCTOR'S KICK.

A St. Louis boy, Floyd Fisher, has been awarded $1,000 in a verdict against the Transit Co., damages for a kick from a conductor. The boy was stealing a ride on the car when the conductor kicked him off. As a result of the kick, the boy may lose his sight and power of speech.

The liability of the corporation for this kick is a matter of law. But what of the man who administered the kick? What must be thought of a man who thus brutally assaults a mere boy, subjecting him to weeks of torture and years of misery, as a punishment for the boyish prank of stealing a ride? Shall such a man get off scot-free?

It is true that street car conductors are subjected to daily annoyance by thoughtless and mischievous boys. But this is no excuse for brutal conduct and possible murder.

West End people have a notion that the higher the amount paid to the police commissioner the more saloons appear in the residence districts.

MRS. VAN VORST'S EXPLANATIONS.

Mrs. John Van Vorst has recently made some marvelous discoveries of an unknown race of people which promise to rival in picturesque interest the "finds" of Du Chaillu, Livingston and Stanley in Central Africa, and those of Sir George Lander in the hill country of Thibet.

Mrs. Van Vorst worked as a factory girl part of a winter and in the following spring.

"One of it! What a surprising experience." "The observations I was able to make," says Mrs. Van Vorst, "in Harper's Monthly, "the conclusions I draw, however, must be referred to as a document prepared" probably the only woman of education who has stayed so long a time as a laborer among the laborers."

They must be queer if they don't number a single woman of education among them. Quite as curious as Du Chaillu's dwarfs or the two-headed people seen by ancient travelers.

"For all of us," Mrs. Van Vorst adds, "whom the happiness of this unknown class, the poor, may concern, there is work to undertake."

Mrs. Van Vorst falls into a common error. She imagines that what is unknown to her and her narrow little social circle of friends is unknown to all. Quite the contrary. There is a wide sea of knowledge and wisdom which the lady and "all of us" never saw, but which is the common property of everybody but "all of us."

To the vast majority the poor are not an unknown class.

Among other facts which may surprise Mrs. Van Vorst and "all of us" is that the poor actually keep the lady in food and clothing while she writes her remarkable magazine articles.

People who are most helpless and must have things done for them, from buttoning a dress and taking a bath to providing and cooking victuals are those who get most excited about the unknown poor when they hear of them.

The poor have been helping Mrs. Van Vorst all her life and she never knew it. Probably she doesn't know it now. Whether or not she knows it does not much matter, but she can rest assured that she cannot help the poor except by declining longer to accept their help.

Let her put away the notion that there are two classes, the rich, educated and superior; and the poor, ignorant and inferior, and know that humanity is the essential fact of rich and poor alike. She will then have a clearer understanding of the work there is for herself and "all of us" to undertake.

The bill providing for municipal ownership of street railways in Illinois has been signed by Gov. Yates and is therefore now a law. There will soon be more municipal ownership unless there is more fair dealing with the public by great corporations.

THE SUPREME COURT'S DECISIONS.

The decisions of the State Supreme Court in the perjury cases of Faulkner and Lehmann can hardly be said to cause disappointment in the community, because, strangely enough, they were anticipated and publicly predicted. But they did cause regret that the court should have found it necessary to reverse and remand both of the cases. The court's action intensified an unfortunate popular impression that it is impossible to bring the perpetrators of the crimes committed in conjunction with municipal bribery to justice.

The Post-Dispatch does not intimate that there is just ground for this public impression. Apparently the ground for it is the frequency of the Supreme Court's decisions in favor of public officials charged with crimes, and the general public belief in the power of the political machine to influence the acts of public officials, including even those of the judges. This impression finds expression in open attacks, or covert sneers and insinuations, which creep here and there into print and which cannot be ignored as evidence of a most deplorable condition of public sentiment with regard to the administration of justice.

The Post-Dispatch deprecates the sentiment. No citizen who loves law and order and cherishes their institutions can view it without sorrow. The courts should have the full confidence of the public. They should be sacred from mere suspicion and insinuation. They should be guarded from either any shadow of cause for suspicion or any unjust aspersion. None but the clearest evidence of injustice, of bias or of unworthy influence, should be permitted to reflect upon the integrity or capacity of the court.

In these cases the Supreme Court has based its adverse decisions upon rulings of the trial court which it declares improper. Apparently they apply only to specific rulings and technicalities and do not affect the principles of law involved in the cases. There is nothing in the decisions to prevent a successful prosecution of these or other defendants, charged with similar crimes, upon the lines laid down by the court, avoiding the errors designated. The errors objected to are technical and not vital to the question of the possibility of successful prosecution.

The circuit judges should find in these adverse decisions of the so-called陪审团 cases warning of the necessity of the greatest care and caution in the trial of such cases; but the disengagement so far is that of delay only.

As the courts must keep free from even the appearance of yielding to popular clamor, or political power, the people should guard against hasty judgment, prompted by passion or prejudice. The hatred of corruption, the general belief in the guilt of the men charged with bribery and perjury and the eager desire to see the city's plunderers punished, should not lead the public to form unjust opinions of the conduct of judges and prosecuting officers, who must adhere to the law.

Perhaps this may explain the well-known experience of seeing stars and flashes of light when one gets a knockout blow. Not only is the man's physical equilibrium disturbed and his brain temporarily stunned, but his halo is shaken out of shape, and some of its fragments produce the stars and flashes.

Of course, even a knockout blow does not destroy one's halo, for you can't disrupt a mere emanation. It reunites and goes on emanating, like a smoke ring that one tries to cut.

Now that it is known that we all have haloes, it will be interesting to find out if there is any difference between the halo of the bad man and the saint. It would be an incentive to walk in the straight path, if by doing so we could polish up our haloes and prove scientifically that we had done so.

POET AND PHILOSOPHER

GARDENING.

He was a summer gardener.
He never handled flowers,
Yet to the garden he would go,
And linger there for hours.
He had no bright begonias,
Geraniums or phlox,
And all the blossoms that he had
Were figured on his socks.He never used a spade or hoe
Or dallied with the ground,
And yet a better gardener
On earth could not be found.
Rather than lop the ilies he Preferred to loop the loop,
And riding scenes railway he Considered quite a coup.He loved to sit around at night
Commingling with a "pot."
When he was in a pensive mood
Or most uncommon hot
Or when the nights were torrid he Thought nothing quite so grand
As to repose beneath the trees
And listen to the band.He was a summer gardener.
He never handled flowers,
But to a bill of vaudeville
He could pay heed for hours.
He had no bright geraniums
To claim his loving care,
But he was Johnnie-on-the-spot
Wherever there was air.

Haloes for All of Us.

A few days ago a scientific preacher produced a veritable halo around the head of the man who was presumably a saint. The halo emanated from the head of the man, but its source was a powerful frictional electrical machine in the room. No one would value a halo of that kind.

But now Prof. A. W. Goodspeed of the University of Pennsylvania assures us we all have real haloes. He has proved it by experiments lasting over three months. He has photographed objects by the light emanating from his hand, and can do it again. He believed that mice and other small animals could see a light of a human body in the dark. The aura of Baron von Reichenbach and the early mesmerists seems to be a scientific fact.

Perhaps this may explain the well-known experience of seeing stars and flashes of light when one gets a knockout blow. Not only is the man's physical equilibrium disturbed and his brain temporarily stunned, but his halo is shaken out of shape, and some of its fragments produce the stars and flashes.

Of course, even a knockout blow does not destroy one's halo, for you can't disrupt a mere emanation. It reunites and goes on emanating, like a smoke ring that one tries to cut.

Now that it is known that we all have haloes, it will be interesting to find out if there is any difference between the halo of the bad man and the saint. It would be an incentive to walk in the straight path, if by doing so we could polish up our haloes and prove scientifically that we had done so.

STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE.

"Sassy" to R. Kipling.
There is a Vermont bookseller who never tires of repeating the retort that he once made to Rudyard Kipling.

This bookseller lives in Montpelier, and Mr. Kipling during his visit to the town one day. He is a thin sharp man, and the poet, taking an interest in him, questioned him about his business.

"How many books do you sell a day here?"

"What is the profit of bookselling in Montpelier?"

"Do they read me hereabouts?"

These and other questions Mr. Kipling asked. Finally he took up "Cecilie," a work of George Moore's.

"Is this good?" he said.

"I don't know, sir."

"You don't know? Why, haven't you read it?"

"No, sir."

Kipling frowned at the little man. "A bookseller," he said, "and you don't read your own books."

The other, very much enraged, retorted hotly:

"If I were a druggist, would you make me take my own drugs?"

Why Griscom Laughed.

A man with a wooden leg succeeded in getting a place in the office of Clement A. Griscom, head of the shipping firm. Mr. Griscom was generous, but not careless, in giving alms. He told the cripple not to cross his path again unless he could prove satisfactorily that he was worth more than a quarter.

In the course of a few days the man with the wooden leg again faced Mr. Griscom. A bed and a meal were the cripple's requirements this time, as stated in his appeal.

"Can't you show that you are worth more today than you were two days ago?" asked Mr. Griscom sternly.

"Yes, sir," said the man, unhesitatingly.

"As he shoved forward his wooden appendage. "Look at that leg."

"Is not that the same leg you had on the other day?" questioned the magnate.

"It is, sir," answered the cripple, as he pulled a newspaper from his pocket, "but by this paper you'll see as how the price of lumber has gone up and made my leg more valuable."

Mr. Griscom has adopted a new rule for determining the increased valuation of damaged property.

Where Warren Fell.

Charles Francis Adams, who was escorting a British friend to visit the different objects of attraction in the vicinity of Boston, brought him to Bunker Hill. They were walking at the splendid monument when Mr. Adams remarked: "This is the place, sir, where Warren fell." "Ah!" replied the Englishman, evidently not posted upon local historical matters, "did it hurt him, much?"

Mr. Adams looked at his friend. "Hurt him," he said, "he was killed, sir."

"Ah, he was, eh?" said the Englishman, still eying the monument.

"Yes, he was, sir," he continued, referring to his height in his own mind.

"Well, I should think he would have been tall for his size," he said, "but he was not tall for his size."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

"So fall as far as he could have been."

THE MEN AND WOMEN

Who Enjoy the Choicest Products of the World's Commerce.

Knowledge of What Is Best More Important Than Wealth With-out It.

It must be apparent to every one that qualities of the highest order are necessary to enable the best of the products of modern civilization to attain permanent universal acceptance. However loudly heralded, they may not hope for world-wide preeminence unless they meet with the general approval, not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting, enjoying and learning the real worth of the choicer products. The combination, consequently, becomes important to others, since to meet the requirements of the well informed of all countries the method of manufacture must be of the most perfect order and the combination the most excellent in quality. This is true of food products only, but is especially applicable to medicinal agents and after nearly a quarter of a century of growth and general use the excellent remedy, Syrup of Figs, is everywhere accepted, throughout the world, as the best of family laxatives. Its quality is due only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative and nutritive principles of plants known to act most beneficially on the system and presented in the form of a pleasant and refreshing liquid, but also to the method of manufacture of the California Fig Syrup which ensures that its purity and purity essential in a remedy intended for family use. Ask any physician who is well informed and he will answer at once that it is an excellent laxative. If at all eminent in his profession and has made a special study of laxatives and their effects, he will assure you that it is the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after-effects. Every well-informed doctor of reputation and standing knows that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative and is glad to sell it at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, because it gives general satisfaction, but one should remember that in order to get the benefit of the Syrup of Figs it is necessary to buy the genuine, which is sold in original packages only; the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs and also the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

Owing to its fame as the only institution to which the broken down old joke may retire for rest and rejuvenation, the Old Jokes' Home has been signalized by O. B. LITTLE FIREWORKS
ABOUT CORBETT

Champion's Quiet Work Encouraged Keefe's East Side Supporters.

East St. Louis is downcast this morning. It placed its hopes, if not its money, on fighter Jack Keefe in his bout with champion Young Corbett at the West End Club Tuesday night.

It thought that Keefe would stay six rounds with the man who whipped McGovern, before the fight was over. When the bout was two rounds old, Keefe's supporters were standing in their chairs, screaming frantically: "Put him out, Jack. Put him out!"

They thought the champion was in a bad way.

To many it appeared so. The spectacle of Keefe, fit as a fiddle, fighting the featherweight leader, landing, too, was enough to lead to the belief.

Corbett was almost purple in the face from want of condition, and head down, he appeared to be taking what Keefe was sending because he was unable to stop his opponent.

In the next round the Bloody Island crowd began to go down like lead. Corbett, after a few minutes of feinting Keefe, took two or three chops on the top of his head, and, suddenly assuming a new aggressiveness, backed Keefe to near the ropes, where he shot out a right and left to the jaw.

Keefe toppled at the first and went down between the ropes from the second.

He struggled to rise, but fell back again. As the referee was proclaiming Corbett victor, Keefe rose and staggered dizzily to his corner, still groggy from the effects of the blow.

Fight Appeared to Lack Action.

The fight itself was a distinct disappointment to most of the followers of the champion. It was a struggle in action.

The first rounds contained little incident. Both men were very slow to begin, and it was Keefe who finally started matters. He began very gingerly, and was palpably nervous at the outset. Corbett missed one or two leads, and no damage had been done by either until near the close, when the champion stepped quickly in after Keefe had missed and sent the East St. Louis fighter to the floor with an unconscious blow and an unimpressive-looking jolt.

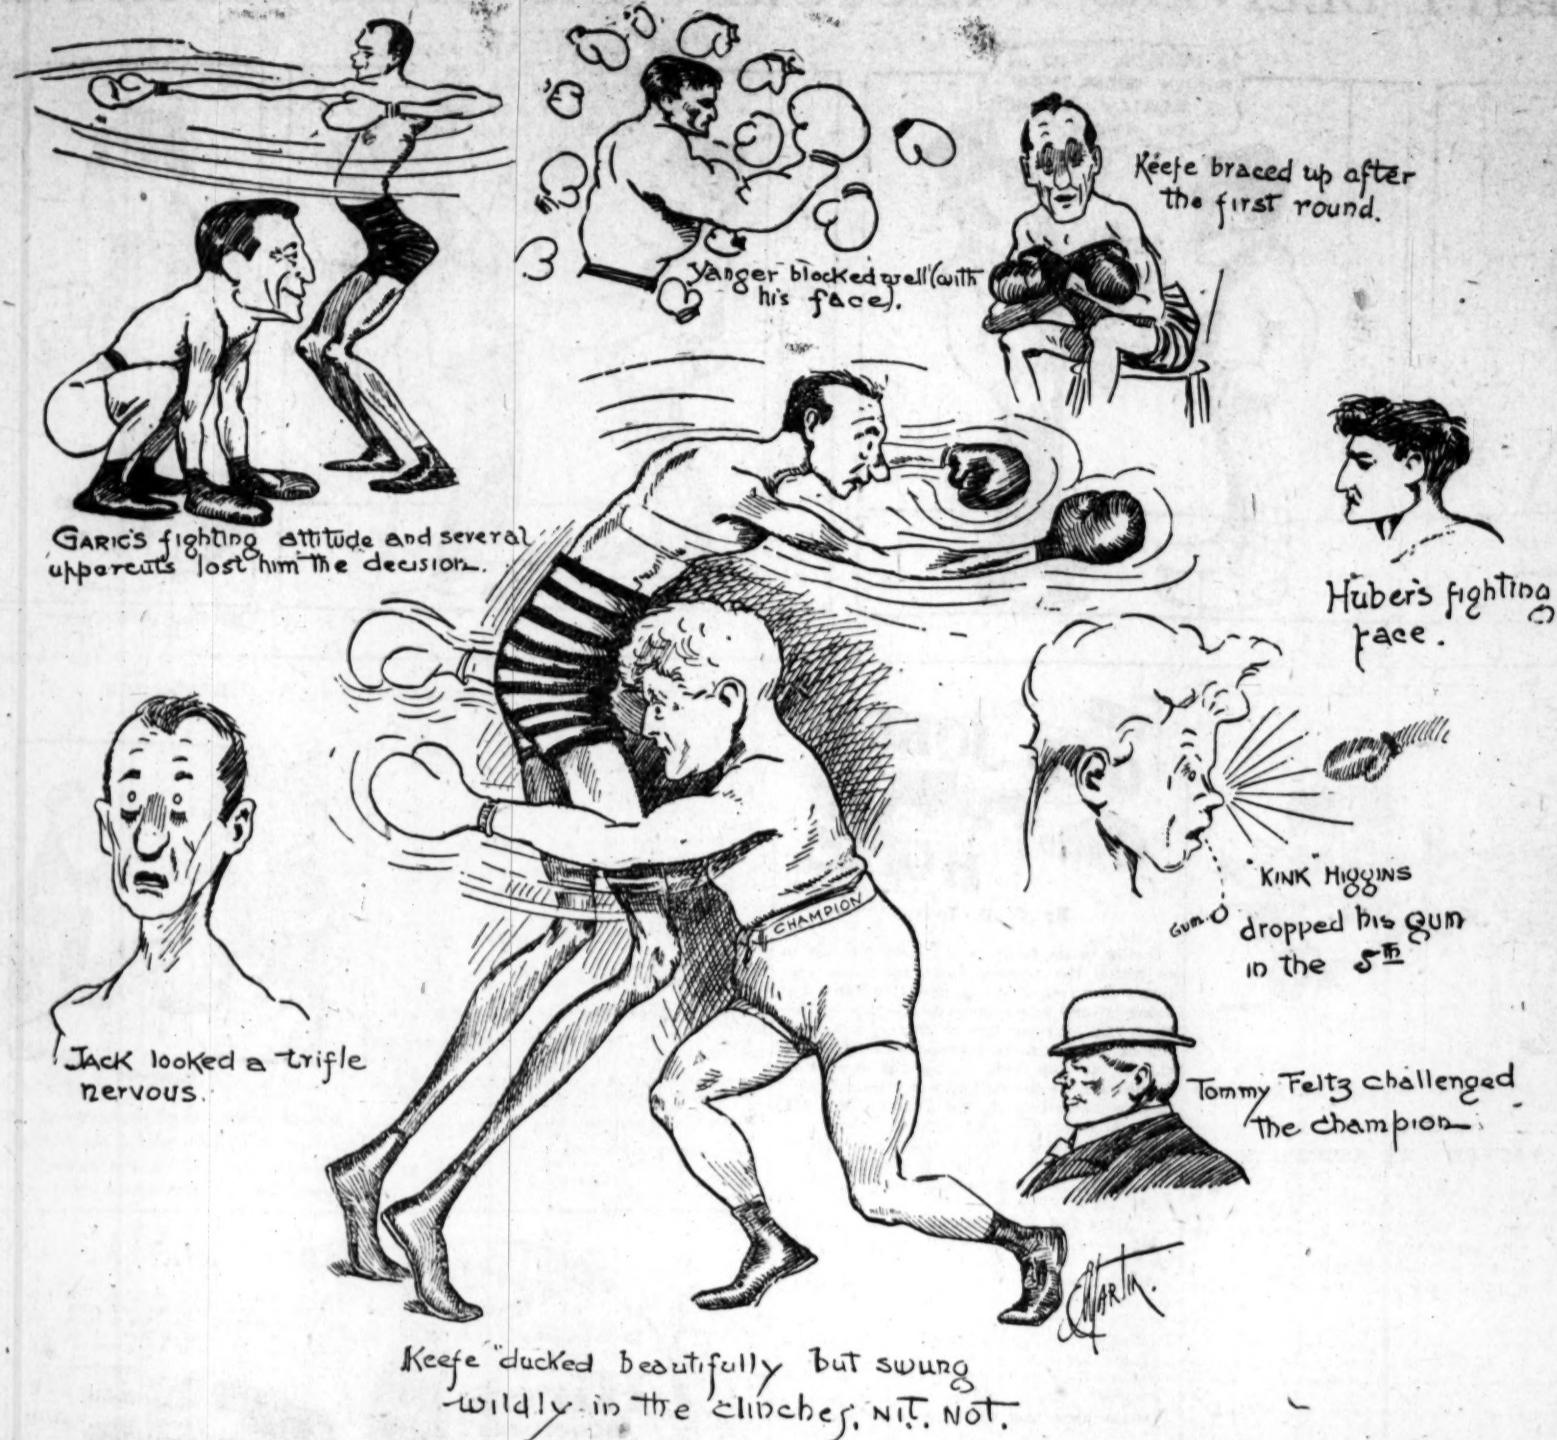

Keefe was not hurt, however, and finished the round creditably.

In the second rounds assumed a different phase. Keefe, realizing that his chance was to break in upon Corbett, fought madly and fought well. He hit the champion several times and they looked hard enough to hurt.

The crowd of East St. Louis rooters was howling for Keefe to finish Corbett. He kept up his gait. Young Corbett not even hurrying him to the end of his way or avoid the blows. Head down, he tossed off Keefe's blows with a shake of his tawny mane and set Keefe's face right to the current of Keefe's blows.

A glancing blow sent Corbett to the floor and then the Keefe supporters were wild. Corbett leisurely arose and as Keefe rushed in stuck out his left and met him squarely in the face. Keefe backed off like a tug

THE FISTIC FIREWORKS IN WHICH YOUNG CORBETT GOT ALL THE "A-A-H'S"

BY YOUNG CORBETT.

"Keefe is a good boy and hit me several good ones during the bout. I have to lay back for a couple of rounds to see what his stock in trade might be."

"While I was finding out I butted into two or three good ones, but it is bound to come. It's part of a fighter's business to pay in this way for valuable information he gets. It did not take long to size Keefe up. 'He left his jaw exposed and all I had to do was to plant a couple of peaches in the garden and the stuff was off. What do I think of Keefe? Excuse me, I've got a train to catch."

Keefe was doing strong fighting at the close, still in a leisurely, unimpressive manner.

Aval Punch.

Bid the Work.

The round opened after the same style. Keefe started to do damage, but Corbett evidently concluded the affair had gone far enough. He stopped Keefe speedily by short arm body jolts, forced him back, and finding an opening crossed over a one-two on Keefe's jaw.

That was the end.

The fight was explanation enough how Eastern fighters managed to make such good showings against the champion. It also explains how the champion whipped McGovern.

Judging by last night's battle, the champion is anything but a spectacular scrap. He was slow and deliberate under fire, though only when it was of no advantage.

He had nothing of the dash-in tactics of McGovern, but on the contrary, waited for his enemy to unload his trumpet before springing his own stock in trade.

His manner of fighting is much less interesting than that of dozens of inferior men who have appeared at the West End Club. After the first round of the battle with Keefe more than one was heard to remark: "I don't see where the champion is in about the fellow."

They saw the third round.

Corbett had an awful punch. It does not startle him. It is a tremendous driving describes a long arc, like that of many fighters. The crowd does not draw up its eyebrows when it is delivered.

It is delivered straight for the part, and passes through a short space before landing. It goes like lightning, and when it is there, that is terrible. That which drove Keefe was terrible in appearance, but final in results.

Offer Hard.

Head to Blows.

Corbett wastes little time in sparring, and it is this, with a generally bad physical condition, which has cost him many advantages in the ring. He is not a fighter to invite to particular all men who have become accustomed elsewhere.

He looks to the finality and not to the points. He is something of a boxer, but his punches are not as sharp as the ring of punishment and side issues do not count.

With his punch, hard headedness, coolness and rifle-like aim, he is a formidable man for any opponent who will carry the fight to him. Like Jeffries, he has a way of getting his adversary bring the fight up to him.

It appears to be a successful policy to keep preliminary trials to a minimum, and to let the public know prior to Tuesday's contest.

It is a good idea to keep the public informed of the champion's record, and to let them know when when each of his opponents has been beaten.

Saying things about going away—things about things to wear.

Summer nights at summertime call for the Dress Suit or the Tuxedo. Your own interests tell you to have them bear the MacCarthy-Evans label, $45 to $65 for either here.

The day demands a Homespun, Crash, Summer-weight Worsted or Serge Suit—and again your duty towards yourself is to see that it costs "MacCarthy-Evans," $45 to $50 is the price-range.

Nights are chilly at shore and mountain. A MacCarthy-Evans Top Coat ought to be in that trunk. $25 to $50—the price-range.

Prominent Jews Say These Informers Watch for Letters From Czar's Realm Criticizing Government.

THEN, THE WRITERS OFTEN "DISAPPEAR"

Life of Count Cassini, the Russian Ambassador, Has Been Threatened in Several Anonymous Letters.

BUCHAREST, May 20.—A reliable person, who visited Kishineff two days after the massacre, declares here that the troubles occurred on Wednesday and Thursday of the orthodox eastern week. The pretext alleged, but one that had been disproved, was a riot among

The most prominent of the principal agitators was the signal for a premeditated fanatical attack upon the Jews throughout the town. The Jews were ruthlessly overrun, their wives plucked from their houses over their uniforms.

There were also city officials, army officers and all of them were wearing masks. Many of the peasants had blackened their faces.

They are especially anxious, it is said, to get letters written by persecuted Russians to relatives and friends in this country, in order that they may send back to the central government utterances which may be used as justification for further persecution.

Knowledge of this fact, it is understood,

is what makes the Hebrews on this side

so careful not to give verbatim extracts from any foreign letter sent to the masseachers in Kishineff and elsewhere.

"We must protect our countrymen and ourselves," said a prominent Jewish publisher.

"A Russian came to this city a year ago. He said he was a former officer in the Russian army. He was received into our families. He ate at our tables, danced with our girls.

"We found news of a confidential nature was leaking out, so we had a secret warning sent to him. He took the hint and disappeared at once."

"The Italians have their Mafia, and Russia has its band of murderers, who work with as much secrecy and dispatch as the Mafia."

"In 60 days the Russian government does away with any one it wishes to."

"No one who attacks the Russian government is safe."

Since last Friday no money has been brought to Kishineff from this city.

The relief fund is $63,000, of which $50,000 has been contributed by East Side Jews.

I consider it a great privilege to recommend Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsi.

COUNT CASSINI'S LIFE THREATENED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The state department has learned that, since the Kish-ineff massacre, Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, has received anonymous letters threatening his life.

He professes no concern over them, but it is said that he is taking unusual precautions.

Secretary Hay has received a great batch of demands for justice by the United States in behalf of the persecuted Jews in Russia.

The French, English, and individuals and from all over the country.

Under international law Russia is authorized to make reprisals in kind.

The Press, the leading legal review, has been warned for an article mildly repre-hensive of the entire attacks and the laxity of the Russian government in its handling of the affair.

In view of the Russian people, however, says the correspondent, it should be pointed out that there is no sympathy on their part in the question of reprisals.

If Mr. Hay were to send Russia a note on the subject, no matter how friendly the note might be, it would probably cause it, which would make it a very serious matter.

The Press has resulted from returned notes of the Russian government.
